

USW BACKGROUNDER
February 2012
SAVE THE EAST COAST REFINERIES

Shortly after Labor Day 2011, Sunoco announced it was going to permanently shut down its Philadelphia and Marcus Hook, Pa., refineries in July 2012 if a buyer was not found. At the end of September ConocoPhillips idled its Trainer, Pa., refinery. Then on Dec. 1, Sunoco announced it was immediately idling the Marcus Hook plant.

- Sunoco Philadelphia Refinery, about 900 employees (600 hourly, and just under 300 salary) plus approximately 300 contractors on a daily basis, shutdown announced Sept. 6, 2011. The refinery is currently operating.
- Sunoco Marcus Hook, PA Refinery, 610 employees (370 hourly, 240 salaried) plus 150-200 contractors at the facility on a daily basis, shutdown announced Sept. 6, 2011, idle announcement made Dec. 1, 2011. The refinery is currently idled. Buyer deadline: March 1, 2012
- ConocoPhillips Trainer, PA Refinery: about 700 employees & contractors (234 hourly, 160 salaried, 300 contractors), shutdown announced Sept. 27, 2011, idled Sept. 30, 2011. The refinery is currently shut down. Buyer deadline: March 31, 2012.

Congressional and elected state legislators have joined the USW in expressing concern about the negative impact on the Northeast if the Philadelphia area refineries are permanently shuttered.

After the Sunoco shutdown announcement, congressional members wrote letters to the U.S. Department of Energy requesting data on how the refinery closures would impact the availability and price of oil products like gasoline, heating oil, and diesel. The U.S. Energy Information Administration (EIA) issued a report Dec. 23, 2011. In its analysis the EIA said the closures could negatively impact oil product supplies and cause price spikes.

The EIA report said the northeast refineries supplied about 40 percent of the region's gasoline sales and 60 percent of distillate (diesel fuel and heating oil) sales in 2010. About half of this supply came from the three refineries that could be shut down permanently.

USW members and their families have rallied, lobbied members of Congress and state legislators, transmitted letters to the affected Northeast region state governors, circulated petitions in their communities and held news conferences in the hometowns of the refineries.

The USW has requested that other agencies investigate the refinery shutdowns as well. USW International President Leo W. Gerard wrote a letter to the Federal Aviation Administration asking the agency to investigate how the refinery closures will impact the supply and quality of jet fuel to the Northeast airports.

He wrote a second letter to the Pennsylvania attorney general asking for an audit of the three refineries to verify whether or not the companies' claims of unprofitability and economic unsustainability have any merit. In addition, he requested that the antitrust section of the attorney general's office investigate Sunoco to determine whether or not there are sale conditions that might amount to an illegal restraint of trade.

U.S. Senator Robert Casey (D-PA) has taken an active role in trying to keep the Philadelphia area refineries from permanently shutting down. He sent a letter to the Sunoco and ConocoPhillips CEOs offering support and assistance to help find a buyer for the refineries. He also called Feb. 10 for Senate hearings to examine the impact of the refinery closures. He has sent a letter to U.S. Senator Jeff Bingaman (D-NM), chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, requesting a hearing.

Letters transmitted in response to the EIA report by members of Congress to the U.S. Department of Energy and the Federal Trade Commission support the USW contention that American consumers, workers and U.S. energy needs are not being served by the petroleum industry's unilateral shutdown of refining capacity. The USW is calling for congressional and state hearings.
