

Romney Can't Walk Back His Support for Romney-Ryan Budget

Today, before Mitt Romney even took the stage to introduce his new running mate, his adviser Bay Buchanan told NBC News that Romney's budget plans are "not an embrace, line by line, of the Ryan plan. Mitt Romney has his own plan." And Romney campaign internal talking points posted by CNN this morning showed he plans to make this walk-back official.

That's strange, since Romney has strongly endorsed the Romney-Ryan Budget throughout his campaign – turning time and time again to the same tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans on the backs of middle-class families as Paul Ryan has championed in Congress. The Romney-Ryan Budget would turn Medicare into a voucher program, make severe cuts to programs like education that would hamper job creation, and repeal health care reform and key protections in Wall Street reform – all to pay for massive tax cuts for millionaires and billionaires.

Paul Ryan is the perfect pick to implement Mitt Romney's agenda, since they are one and the same: more budget-busting tax cuts for the wealthy no matter the expense for the middle class or the consequences for our economy.

It’s a bold and exciting effort on his part and on the part of the Republicans and it’s very much consistent with what I put out earlier. I think it’s amazing that we have a president who three and a half years in still hasn’t put a proposal out that deals with entitlements. This president's dealing with entitlement reform -- excuse me -- this budget deals with entitlement reform, tax policy, which as you know is very similar to the one that I put out and efforts to reign in excessive spending. I applaud it. It's an excellent piece of work and very much needed." Politico, [3/20/12]

Romney: "I Think It'd Be Marvelous If The Senate Were To Pick Up Paul Ryan's Budget And To Adopt It And Pass It Along To The President." [Associated Press, 4/3/12]

Romney: "Paul Ryan And I Have Been Working Together Over Some Months To Talk About Our Mutual Plans And We're On The Same Page." [Vicki McKenna Show, WIBA, 3/21/12]

Romney: "Well I Have The Highest Respect For Paul And Appreciate The Fact That He Has Been Generous In Spending Time With Me And With My Staff. His Team Has Met With My Team. We've Talked About Everything From Budgets To Medicare Reforms To Taxation." [Mark Belling Show, WISN (Milwaukee, WI), 3/28/12]

Romney On Ryan's Plan: "We Have Been Working, Paul Ryan And I Have Over The Last Several Months, Collaborating A Bit On Plans For A Tax Policy And Spending As Well As Medicare Reform, So It's Not A Surprise That We're As Close As We Are." When asked by Mark Belling if he endorsed the latest Ryan plan, Romney said: "You know, I have already said that I'm supportive of the plan he put forward. I am -- I highly praise what he has done. I think it's courageous. And is the, a very important step. He is taking on not only the need to reform entitlements but the need to cut federal spending, and also the need to put in place a pro-growth tax plan. His proposals and the ones I've outlined in my campaign are very much on the same page. We have been working, Paul Ryan and I have over the last several months, collaborating a bit on plans for a tax policy and spending as well as Medicare reform, so it's not a surprise that we're as close as we are." [Mark Belling, WISN (Milwaukee, WI), 3/21/12]

Romney Praised The Ryan Budget Passed By The House GOP Which Shared "The Same Path Forward" As His Own Plan: "Pro-Growth Tax Cuts, Getting Federal Spending Under Control, And Strengthening Entitlement Programs For Future Generations." Romney statement on the vote on the Ryan budget passed by the U.S. House: "We are making progress. The House of Representatives has unanimously rejected President Obama's vision of an America with higher taxes, unlimited spending, and expansive government. Owing in no small part to the leadership of Paul Ryan, it has put conservative fiscal principles into action and passed a bold budget that directly addresses the drivers of our nation's spending crisis. The House budget and my own plan share the same path forward: pro-growth tax cuts, getting federal spending under control, and strengthening entitlement programs for future generations. I look forward to working with Congress to achieve fiscal discipline and passing a budget that moves us toward a simpler, smarter, and smaller federal government." But, yes. He and the other candidates running for president have embraced these kinds of reforms because we know it's the best way to save and strengthen the Medicare guarantee, save Medicaid --"

O'DONNELL: "If Mitt Romney became president of the United States, you're convinced he would follow through with a lot of the reductions that you make in this --" RYAN: "Yes." O'DONNELL: "--in this plan?"
