

TAA Termination Impacts: By the Numbers

Fact Sheet

The TAA Program was established in 1962, and since 1974 has served more than 5 million American workers. The program certifies more than 100,000 eligible workers annually. In FY 2023, there were 6,886 participants in the TAA Program and 3,110 participants are continuing to be served as of September 30th, 2023.

TAA Reversion 2021

TAA Reversion 2021 was effective July 1, 2021, through June 30, 2022. Under Reversion 2021, worker group eligibility, benefits, and services available to trade-affected workers were significantly limited due to the more restricted provisions.

- More than 40,000 services sector workers and those normally certified under determinations made by the International Trade Commission became ineligible.
- Approximately 8,000 workers annually did not have access to an average of $13,000 in training benefits and an average of $23,000 in income support payments; and more than 4,000 fewer workers could receive training.
- Approximately 23,000 production workers lost eligibility because reversion does not cover workers affected by shifts in production to countries without a Free Trade Agreement with the United States (e.g., China).

TAA Termination Provisions

TAA Termination provisions took effect on July 1, 2022. Under termination, DOL may not conduct new investigations or issue certifications of eligibility for new groups of workers.

Worker Groups Certified – Workers Without Separation

In addition, benefits and services may not be provided to workers who were certified prior to July 1, 2022, but who were not separated before that date. As a result, thousands of such workers, are ineligible for TAA benefits or services. Some of the larger company impacts are listed below along with the approximate number of affected workers:

- Tennessee: Electrolux Employees - 1,925 workers
- Tennessee: CJ Automotive - 400 workers
- Ohio: Tenneco - 1,300 workers
- Illinois: Fiat Chrysler (FCA US) - 1,400 workers
- Florida: Stryker Employment Company - 500 workers
- Pennsylvania: Honeywell - 150 workers
- Indiana: Medtronic - 400 workers

Pending Petitions

As of December 9, 2024, 995 petitions covering 150,058 workers are pending investigation – including 28 petitions that were still pending as of July 1, 2022. Table 1 below represents petitions either pending at termination or filed after termination. No further investigation on behalf of workers is permitted.<sup>1</sup>

In fact, a Republican-controlled Congress could enhance Trump’s ability to pass legislation related to his trade priorities. There may be bipartisan support for additional funds to help American workers displaced by foreign competition, especially in industries hit hard by tariffs through Trade Adjustment Assistance and Worker Retraining. While Democrats have typically championed such programs, the GOP might align with Trump’s emphasis on protecting US jobs, especially in manufacturing. We could also see a renewal of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program which provided duty-free access to the US market for certain products from eligible developing countries and expired on December 31, 2020. Attempts to renew GSP have failed over partisan disagreements over labor and environmental standards supported by Democrats, but in a Republican-controlled Congress, we may see a renewed effort to reauthorize the program.

They should be trying to adapt to it.	Artificial intelligence, which will likely bring increased automation to the professions and middle management, means most American workers have skin in this game. The federal Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program is probably a good place to start. TAA, which Congress and the Biden administration inexplicably allowed to lapse in 2022, was established under the Kennedy administration to help retrain trade-impacted workers. The program provides a wide range of benefits including training, job search and relocation allowances, a health coverage tax credit, income support, and other reemployment services.

But with a mix of grit and perseverance, along with assistance from the Idaho Department of Labor, he made his dream come true. Florea attended North Idaho College for two years starting in the spring of 2010. In 2012, after completing classes at North Idaho College and with the help of the Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) Program, he got a call from the Bonner County Sheriff's Office offering him employment.

Tell Congress to Reauthorize TAA Now!	Stakeholder Engagement: For decades now, we have seen the devastating results unfair trade has on workers and their communities. We've pushed for a level playing field and accountability to countries that dump their goods and manipulate our trade laws, but we are far from achieving worker centric trade policy. This means we do all we can to help workers when their facilities close and they are left out in the cold. One of those tools is Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA). TAA is a benefit that offers up to two years of robust job training benefits for workers who lose their jobs because of dumped and subsidized imports, changes in tariffs, and trade agreements. According to a study by the U.S. Census Bureau, TAA recipients earn an average of $50,000 more in income over a 10-year period compared to workers who did not participate in the program.

They make some resources redundant and free them up for other, more productive uses. Innovation and institutional change run into distributional problems because some people might be made worse off — absolutely and permanently. Sometimes those who take losses from a changing status quo can veto the change. Government social insurance or trade adjustment assistance, for example, might make it easier for people to swallow the bitter pills of losing their livelihoods. Civil institutions like houses of worship, civic organizations, and other groups help people having hard times. Whether people deserve help might be irrelevant to the political reality. Whether it achieves this goal in practice, however, remains unclear; it could also result in worse job matches and persistently low wages after benefits expire. In Wage Insurance for Displaced Workers (NBER Working Paper 32464), Benjamin G. Hyman, Brian K. Kovak, and Adam Leive study the impacts of wage insurance in the context of the US Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) Program, which compensates workers who become unemployed as a result of international trade. Eligibility for wage insurance through the US Trade Adjustment Assistance Program increases displaced workers’ earnings by $18,000 (26 percent) over the four years following displacement.

Trade Adjustment Assistance for Workers (TAA) Program
Impacts of Program Termination

January 10, 2024	Labor’s TAA program helps laid-off workers segue to employment opportunities	IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (KIFI) - James Black experienced a job loss when his employer closed a large section of its manufacturing division in 2013. The jobs and a portion of the production of articles and supply of services shifted to a foreign country. Through the federally funded Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program, Black and other affected coworkers have access to reemployment benefits. With the help of TAA staff at the Idaho Department of Labor, Black enrolled in the Information Technology Systems program at Idaho State University seven years after his layoff to learn more about computers and increase his chances of employment in the industry. “I am very thankful for the opportunity the TAA program provided me to transition from my old industry into a new one,” Black said. “I couldn’t have made it without it.” Another worker in Idaho, Jesus Cabrera, was also eligible for reemployment assistance after he was laid off in 2019. Because of this, Cabrera chose to pursue a new career as an electrician. “I’m about to finish my four-year apprenticeship, and I signed up to take my journeyman-level training next month. Thanks to this opportunity, my wages have increased. I’m making more than I did two to three years ago,” Cabrera said. Like Black and Cabrera, there are many workers across the state who may still be eligible for training benefits due to layoffs. The training benefits help workers find a job at a skill level similar to or higher than their trade-affected employment. Employees who were laid off through no fault of their own between 2001 and June 30, 2022, and worked for a company that had an approved TAA petition, may be eligible for TAA training benefits.

December 6, 2023	Senators Baldwin and Cassidy Introduce Resilient Communities Act to Aid Communities Harmed By Unfair Trade	On December 6, 2023, Senator Tammy Baldwin (D-WI) and Senator Bill Cassidy (R-LA) introduced a bill titled the Resilient Communities Act to support communities in the United States that have been negatively affected by unfair trade. This legislation would direct antidumping and countervailing duty revenue collected by U.S. Customs and Border Protection (“CBP”) to a Resilient Communities Fund kept by the U.S. Department of Commerce (“Commerce”). According to Senator Baldwin, the bill aims to “invest in the places that are experiencing layoffs or closures because Chinese companies aren’t playing by the rules.” Both senators noted that Americans have lost millions of jobs to unfair trade over the past three decades. To combat this harm, Commerce could allocate funds to help U.S. producers to continue manufacturing and competing against unfair trade. A key characteristic of the Resilient Communities Fund is that it would be funded by tariff revenue collected by CBP, distinguishing it from a similar federal program – Trade Adjustment Assistance (“TAA”) – that relied on regular Congressional reauthorization and refunding. Established in 1962, the TAA Program helped workers suffering from job losses or reduced wages as a result of import competition, and offered benefits such as job training, job search and relocation allowances, income support, and other reemployment services; it has served more than 5 million American workers since 1974.

Mistakes, as they say, were made. As artificial intelligence bears down on jobs and skills, we should be careful not to make the same mistakes again when it comes to under-resourcing workers for the stresses, uncertainties, and strains of economic transitions.

August 18, 2023	As the coal industry shrinks, miners deserve a just transition – here’s what it means	There is no road map for transitioning communities away from coal, but there are lessons from history. For example, American workers faced losses from international competition when the U.S. joined liberalized trade agreements in the second half of the 20th century. In response, Congress passed legislation in 1974 that established the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program, which still operates today. It provides aid primarily to factory workers who can show that they have lost jobs or wages because of increased international competition.

An expansive and well-funded program geared toward the AI labor-market shift would help ease turbulence for workers by providing relocation grants and wage insurance to temporarily bridge the wage gap when workers find employment in lower-paying jobs.
